Gillian McCutcheon

Gillian became involved in music from an early age, studying both piano and clarinet. On entering Edinburgh University to study for her BMUS, Gillian travelled to London to study clarinet with the late Thea King. She also won numerous awards including the Tovey Memorial Prize for Performance and the Frazer Scholarship which enabled her to continue her postgraduate studies at the Royal Academy of Music in London.

Since graduating with an M.Mus and LRAM, Gillian has continued performing giving numerous recitals for the BBC both as a soloist and chamber musician. She is also in demand both as a teacher and festival adjudicator back home in her native Northern Ireland.
